

2.5 ENVIRONMENTAL SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

1. Outline of the Division

The division of Environmental Science and Technology currently numbers 7 chairs and 16 laboratories, i.e. Chair of Comparative Agricultural Science which is researching on the regions from international viewpoints, Chair of Bio-environmental Science which is based on the forest and biomaterial science, Chair of Agro-ecosystem Science which is based on bio-ecology and bioscience, Chair of Environmental development Engineering which aims engineering improvement of rural production site, Chair of Land and Water Resources Management which aims physical and social improvement of rural area, Chair of Bioproduction Engineering which aims creation and application of various engineering techniques in fields, and Chair of Nuclear Science and Engineering (Research Reactor Institute) which aims application of radiation science to environmental science.

2. Number of students

Master's Program 1st	41 名
Master's Program 2nd	53 名
Doctor's Program	44 名

3. Events in 2009

This division has a large Graduate program with 138 students enrolled: (94 in the Master's Program including 1 foreign student and 44 in the Doctor's Program including 7 foreign students) in this year.

There would be no significant change in terms of personnel, except that Dr. Naoya Osawa (previous lecturer, Laboratory of Forestry Ecology) was promoted to Associate Professor on August 1st, 2010.

The contents of our division's web page were completely revised in December, 2010 in order to provide the latest information.